
Judith,

Thanks for your note and support. After the mugging, DWP put in a meter they could read from the street. That should solve our particular problem, but not changing their policy for others continues to put dogs and the DWP's employees at risk for no good reason. They have smart meters but I was told that they have said they are too expensive to widely install.

My wife and I are traveling, but I'll pat Ralph for you when we're back home.

Best,

Steve Markoff

Sent from AOL Mobile Mail

-----Original Message-----

From: Judith Steele

To: scmarkoff <scmarkoff@aol.com>

Sent: Mon, Aug 3, 2015 10:08 PM

Subject: Dog Mugging

FYI - as a dog lover and owner, I sympathize with your situation. When I got dogs when I lived in Long Beach, Southern California Edison told me I could have a radio meter that they could read from the street. This was back in 1988 so it's not new technology. I don't understand why DWP couldn't provide that for you. That way no one has to enter your property. Good luck with your mission. And pats to your pup.

Judith Stern, Ph.D.

Sent from my iPhone